PAMELA HAMAMOTO

VISIONARY.INSPIRING.CHAMPION

Ambassador Pamela K. Hamamoto served as Permanent Representative of the United States Mission in Geneva from June 2014 until January 2017, leading the U.S. Mission’s engagement on a diverse range of issues, including gender equality and women’s empowerment, and climate change and the environment. In 2015, she launched The Future She Deserves, a cross-cutting initiative driving collaboration and creative problem-solving in the areas of gender-based violence, adolescent girls’ health, economic empowerment, and increased leadership opportunities. She co-founded Geneva Gender Champions, a leadership network uniting key decision-makers to advance gender equality. Pamela began her career working as a civil engineer in the clean energy sector and as a strategic advisor in the telecommunications industry. She received undergraduate and graduate degrees in Civil Engineering from Stanford University and an M.B.A. from the UCLA Anderson School of Management.
